Ullmann Wealth Partners and the Ullmann Advised Fund pledged to match gifts of up to $40,000 to the USO Jacksonville to expand the services offered through the Healthy Military Families Initiative. The USO met the challenge and raised the required funds from various donors in the community to receive the match.

“We are pleased to support the USO and our military families. This match demonstrates the big impact small business owners and individuals can have to help those military families in need in our local our community.” said Glenn Ullman. “Being a veteran myself, the cause is near and dear to me.”

The Jacksonville USO originally partnered with several agencies and small businesses to address the problem of food insecurity in our community and started the Healthy Military Families Initiative in 2018. This Initiative has been there to provide young families serving on active duty with the critical resources they need and deserve (food, diapers, baby formula, etc.). The goal was to ensure that our troops had the same community resources to address their food insecurity issues as civilians in the same income ranges in the communities where they served*. While the Mayport facility has always maintained a modest food pantry for the young enlisted, the need has grown bigger than what the current program can support.

To fully address the need, the Jacksonville USO is in the process of building a 2,400 square foot center at our Mayport facility dedicated to health and wellness as we work to address the issue of food insecurity experienced by those young, lower ranking active duty enlisted families. The new facility will allow our USO to continue our program from Pilot (70 families) to Scale *400 + families) -- providing healthy fruits, meats and vegetables to our families in need. With the funds raised through this matching program, families will have a place to receive healthy foods and education on healthy eating and cooking.

Other key partners of our USO Healthy Military Families Initiative, along with Ullmann Wealth Partners and the Ullmann Advised Fund, include: The Armed Forces Families Foundation, Humana Military, The Community Foundation, and Feeding Northeast Florida.
