BEACON COMMUNICATIONS

Beacon Communications is a publishing and sales management company. Its principal newspaper is the twice-weekly Warwick Beacon, serving Rhode Island's second largest city. In addition to the Beacon, the company owns and publishes two weekly newspapers, the Cranston Herald and the Johnston Sun Rise, serving Cranston and Johnston respectively, a weekly shopping guide, the The Reminder, and a senior-oriented state-wide publication, PrimeTime Magazine. Beacon Communications owns and manages RhodyBeat.com – a community website including content from all of our publications, news, contests, local blogs, classified advertising – plus many links of interest.

Beacon Communications is also the home of RhodyPrints, a full-service advertising specialty products company.

Beacon Communications also functions as the sales management company for RING, the Rhode Island Newspaper Group. Established in 1977, RING is an association of publishing companies representing 19 weekly newspapers. With one call, one order and one bill, advertisers reach more than 130,000 homes in Rhode Island and southeastern Massachusetts. Every paper is audited and is locally edited to its community. Nine of the publications are sold by subscription and distributed by mail, carrier or at a newsstand. RING is the best marketing tool for advertisers who want to reach Rhode Island's extensive network of community newspapers with one phone call.
