POW/MIA Recognition Day is Sept. 20

PIERRE — Governor Kristi Noem has proclaimed Sept. 20, as "POW/MIA Recognition Day to remember and honor the returned U.S. Prisoners of War (POWs) and all Americans still captured, unaccounted for, or Missing in Action (MIA)."

Currently, South Dakota has seven veterans still missing from the Vietnam War, 34 unaccounted for from the Korean War, and 310 from World War II.

Students tee up for on-the-course management learning experience

SIoux FALLS — Preparing for the golf event of the year in Sioux Falls takes some work. It's the behind-the-scenes preparation that many don't think about or notice but takes considerable time and effort.

For the Sanford International golf tournament, that means setting up viewing areas, putting up fencing and making sure the course is in top shape.

Roughly 50 South Dakota State University students spent time on Sept. 3 and 5 helping the Minnehaha Country Club and Pro Links Sports prepare for the PGA Tour Champions event.

The students are part of the facilities management course offered in the sport and recreation management program at SDSU. An aspect of the class is getting out of the classroom and seeing what it really takes to put on these large sporting events.

The volunteer opportunity presented mutually beneficial experiences. The students gained hands-on practice in facilities and event management, and the tournament staff gained over 50 eager volunteers to help with tasks that would have otherwise taken hours.

These types of experiences are a "cornerstone" of the program, according to Riley Northrup, instructor in SDSU's School of Health and Human Sciences.

"The really big piece to connect point A to point B in terms of learning is getting out in the field and seeing it," Northrup said. He added the students also participate in Jackrabbits Athletics events.

Kassidy Klepper is a senior sport and recreation management student from Austin, Texas. She hopes to work in collegiate recreation beyond graduation and says experiences like these are important for preparing for her future career.

"Recreation isn't just one thing," Klepper said. "Being able to experience volunteering or working with other facilities of different types prepares you for different scenarios and different things in the workforce."

Students helped set up tables and chairs in viewing areas and aesthetic fencing around the course.

"It's just tremendous to help us achieve the goal and then keep having good success every year," Davis Trosin, tournament director, said. "As you can imagine with these events, it's a lot of all hands on deck. It's nice for us to be able to rely on not only South Dakota State, but other volunteer groups that help us make this thing happen."

The Sanford International tournament runs through Sept. 15.

New report identifies pollution reductions needed to clean up segment of Big Sioux River

BY JOSHUA HAIAR S.D. SEARCHLIGHT

South Dakota environmental regulators are accepting public comments on a new set of draft pollution reduction targets for a 10-mile segment of the Big Sioux River in Brookings County.

The document from the Department of Agriculture and Natural Resources proposes "total maximum daily loads," which are the levels of pollution a waterbody can suffer and still meet water quality standards. About 450 square miles of land form the watershed for the river segment from Volga to south of Brookings.

The river segment is too polluted to support some kinds of warmwater fish, according to the department. The problem is "total suspended solids," including soil that

Former Michigan players suing NCAA, Big Ten Network

S.D. Attorney General also files suit against NCAA

BY RALPH D. RUSSO AP COLLEGE FOOTBALL WRITER

Former Michigan football stars Denard Robinson and Braylon Edwards are suing the NCAA and Big Ten Network with other former Wolverines players, claiming they lost out on more than $50 million during their college careers because of the association's now-lifted ban on athletes being compensated for name, image and likeness.

The federal class-action antitrust lawsuit, dated Monday, was filed in the Eastern District of Michigan on behalf of all Michigan football players who played before 2016. It also includes former Wolverine players Mike Martin and Shawn Crable as plaintiffs.

The NCAA and major college conferences are in the process of trying to settle three antitrust lawsuits related to athlete compensation for name, image and likeness. They have a settlement agreement in place to pay $2.78 billion in damages to hundreds of thousands of college athletes, dating back to 2016.

The NCAA changed its rules in 2021 to allow athletes to cash in on their fame through sponsorship and endorsement deals after

AP poll: Republicans are more likely to trust Trump than official election results

BY CHRISTINE FERNANDO AND LINLEY SANDERS ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHICAGO (AP) — For Christopher Pugh, the 2020 election was a turning point.

He already distrusted the government. But as he watched Fox News coverage in the immediate aftermath of the election and read posts on Twitter, the social media platform now known as X, that distrust grew. He now believes the falsehood that the 2020 election was stolen and trusts few people other than former President Donald Trump to deliver him news about election results.

"I trust Donald Trump, not the government," said the 38-year-old Republican from Gulfport, Mississippi. "That's it."

While most Americans trust government-certified election results at least a "moderate" amount, Republicans are more likely to trust Trump and his campaign, according to a new survey from the Associated Press-NORC Center for Public Affairs Research and USAFacts. Americans also are heading into the November election with concerns about misinformation. Many have low trust that the information they receive from presidential candidates — particularly Trump, but also Vice President Kamala Harris — is based on factual information.

Trump continues to lie about the outcome of the 2020 election, saying it was rigged against him even after dozens of his court challenges failed, reviews, recounts and audits in battleground states all affirmed President Joe Biden's win, and Trump's own attorney general said there was no evidence of widespread fraud. Despite no evidence of any widespread fraud, a 2023 poll found that most Republicans believe Biden was not legitimately elected president.

As Trump runs as the Republican candidate for the third time, he also is signaling that he can only lose through widespread fraud. Over the weekend he threatened to prosecute those "involved in unscrupulous behavior" this election should he win in November.

"The only way they can beat us is to cheat," Trump said at a Las Vegas rally in June.

The recent findings from the AP-NORC survey show that a significant chunk of Trump's supporters might be more inclined to believe what he says about the upcoming election results than they are to trust government certifications of election results.

About two-thirds of Republicans trust Trump's campaign at least a moderate amount to provide accurate information about the results of the 2024 election, while only about half say the same about the official certifications of results, the survey found. By contrast, about 9 in 10 Democrats trust the government certification at least

Lester Hargens

MILLER — Lester Hargens, 93, of Miller, passed away with his wife, Carolyn, at his side on Saturday, September 7, 2024, at Good Samaritan Society in Miller.

Lester Hargens

Funeral service are 11 a.m., Friday, Sept. 13, at Trinity Lutheran Church, Miller, with Rev. Rhonda Wellsandt-Zell officiating.

Burial with military honors will follow at Howell Cemetery, rural Miller. Visitation begins at 6 p.m., Thursday, Sept. 12, followed by a 7 p.m. prayer service, all at the church.

Lester William Hargens born January 24, 1931, was a well-loved husband, father, and great-grandfather, whose legacy of love and laughter spilled over and into the lives of several generations.

He was born to George and Bessie (Snyder) Hargens. In his early beginnings, he and his nine siblings were raised and worked together on their 3rd generation family homestead, 16 miles north of Miller. It was there he learned how to be creative with a dollar while enjoying an occasional good time in town with brothers in tow. Lester left all that he knew in 1951 and joined the U.S. Navy, venturing off to Korea. He returned home to the farm in 1956 where he used his wiles to woo and wed the love of his life, Carolyn (Gross) Hargens for 66 years.

To subsidize his farming income, Lester took over the family business of writing insurance for Missouri Valley Insurance after his father's passing. Taking a great leap of faith, Lester and Carolyn moved to Miller in 1969 and purchased Community Oil Company, a small full-service gas station and bulk fuel service that served them well for 40 years.

Lester knew no stranger. Passers-through and longtime neighbors enjoyed his infectious smile and quick wit. To know him was to call him 'friend.' He was an avid fan of his boys' many sporting activities, and enjoyed hunting and fishing with family and friends always with a tale to tell at the end of the day.

Lester passed away peacefully on Saturday, September 7, with Carolyn at his side. A vision by his 4-year old great granddaughter, Layne, "I saw Grandpa climb a ladder in the sky, and Jesus opened the clouds and let him in," gave us the confirmation in our hearts that he is now resting in the arms of Jesus.

As we reminisce and recant the tales of the best moments we've shared with him, it is not lost on us that his sense of humor and trickster ways live on. He has left quite a legacy behind and some pretty sizable shoes to fill.

Lester is survived by his wife, Carolyn and their children: Rick (Melodee) Hargens, Craig Hargens, Michele (Scott) JuVette, Michael Hargens, and Timothy (Sheila) Hargens; their grandchildren: Lindsey (Garret) Chilson; Emily Hargens; Colin (Geri) Hargens, MacKenzie JuVette, Taylor (Katie) JuVette, Sawyer (Shelby) JuVette, Noah JuVette, Tage Hargens, Tristan Hargens, Kiauna Hargens, Nick Zolnowsky, AJ (Trisha) Zolnowsky, Michael (Selena) Hargens, Irma (Freddie) Esparza, Vanessa (Austin) Esparza; 18 great-grandchildren; and brothers; Richard Hargens, Charles Hargens, and Raymond (Linda) Hargens.

He is preceded in death by his parents, George and Bessie Hargens; brothers: George (Lois) Hargens, Edwin (Charlene) Hargens, and Marvin (Donna) Hargens; and sisters: Mabel (Sheldon) Holt, Hazel (Charles) Clement and Eileen (Herb) Stender.

In lieu of flowers, memorials can be directed to the Miller Outlaw Ball Association.

A suspect is in custody after a teen is critically hurt in a shooting at a Nebraska high school

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Omaha police arrested a suspect about half an hour after a shooting Tuesday that critically injured a teenage boy at a high school in Nebraska's largest city.

Families rushed to Omaha Northwest High School after the shooting was reported by the school resource officer during lunch at 12:23 p.m. Omaha Police Deputy Chief Sherie Thomas said officers from several departments quickly responded to the school and found the victim inside.

Thomas said police believe the shooting was an isolated incident between two students. The 14-year-old suspect was arrested three blocks away about 30 minutes later.

Parents tearfully embraced their kids in the parking lot as the first few started to come out of the school after 1 p.m. The rest of the students were reunited with their families over the next couple of hours.

Thomas said a 15-year-old boy was critically injured in the shooting and rushed to a hospital. She said the victim was in stable condition several hours after the shooting.

One student told KETV that he was coming back to school after lunch and ran as fast as he could when he heard screams and saw people running because he didn't want to die.

Two nearby Catholic high schools — Marian and Roncalli high schools — were also locked down after the shooting, but that was lifted after the arrest.

Devon DeMott told the Omaha World-Herald that he raced to the school from his home a few blocks away as soon as his son texted him there had been a shooting.

"As fatherly instinct, I jumped in the car and headed up there," said DeMott, who was glad to see a significant police presence when he arrived.

The school district canceled all Tuesday evening activities at Northwest High and all classes on Wednesday. Students are scheduled to return Thursday.

SpaceX launches billionaire to conduct the first private spacewalk

BY MARCIA DUNN
AP AEROSPACE
WRITER

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — A daredevil billionaire rocketed back into orbit Tuesday, aiming to perform the first private spacewalk and venture farther than anyone since NASA's Apollo moonshots.

Unlike his previous chartered flight, tech entrepreneur Jared Isaacman shared the cost with SpaceX this time around, which included developing and testing brand new spacesuits to see how they'll hold up in the harsh vacuum.

If all goes as planned, it will be the first time private citizens conduct a spacewalk, but they won't venture away from the capsule. Considered one of the riskiest parts of spaceflight, spacewalks have been the sole realm of professional astronauts since the former Soviet Union popped open the hatch in 1965, closely followed by the U.S. Today, they are routinely done at the International Space Station.

Isaacman, along with a pair of SpaceX engineers and a former Air Force Thunderbirds pilot, launched before dawn aboard a SpaceX Falcon 9 rocket from Florida. The spacewalk is scheduled for Thursday, midway through the five-day flight.

But first the passengers are shooting for way beyond the International Space Station — an altitude of 870 miles (1,400 kilometers), which would surpass the Earth-lapping record set during NASA's Project Gemini in 1966.

Only the 24 Apollo astronauts who flew to the moon have ventured farther.

The plan is to spend 10 hours at that height — filled with extreme radiation and riddled with debris — before reducing the oval-shaped orbit by half. Even at this lower 435 miles (700 kilometers), the orbit would eclipse the space station and even the Hubble Space Telescope, the highest shuttle astronauts flew.

All four wore SpaceX's spacewalking suits because the entire Dragon capsule will be depressurized for the two-hour spacewalk, exposing everyone to the dangerous environment.

Isaacman and SpaceX's Sarah Gillis will take turns briefly popping out of the hatch. They'll test their white and black-trimmed custom suits by twisting their bodies. Both will always have a hand or foot touching the capsule or attached support structure that resembles the top of a pool ladder.

There will be no dangling at the end of their 12-foot tethers and no jetpack showboating.

Only NASA's suits at the space station come equipped with jet-packs, for emergency use only.

Pilot Scott "Kidd" Poteet and SpaceX's Anna Menon will monitor the spacewalk from inside. Like SpaceX's previous astronaut flights, this one will end with a splashdown off the Florida coast.

"We're sending you hugs from the ground," Launch Director Frank Messina radioed after the crew reached orbit. "May you make history and come home safely."

Isaacman replied: "We wouldn't be on this journey without all 14,000 of you back at SpaceX and everyone else cheering us on."

At a preflight news conference, Isaacman — CEO and founder of the credit card processing company Shift4 — refused to say how much he invested in the flight. "Not a chance," he said.

SpaceX teamed up with Isaacman to pay for spacesuit development and associated costs, said William Gerstenmaier, a SpaceX vice president who once headed space mission operations for NASA.

"We're really starting to push the frontiers with the private sector," Gerstenmaier said.

It's the first of three trips that Isaacman bought from Elon Musk 2 1/2 years ago, soon after returning from his first private SpaceX spaceflight in 2021. Isaacman bankrolled that tourist ride for an undisclosed sum, taking along contest winners and a childhood cancer survivor. The trip raised hundreds of millions for St. Jude Children's Research Hospital.

Spacesuit development took longer than anticipated, delaying this first so-called Polaris Dawn flight until now.

Training was extensive; Poteet said it rivaled anything he experienced during his Air Force flying career.

As SpaceX astronaut trainers, Gillis and Menon helped Isaacman and his previous team — as well as NASA's professional crews — prepare for their rides.

"I wasn't alive when humans walked on the moon. I'd certainly like my kids to see humans walking on the moon and Mars, and venturing out and exploring our solar system," the 41-year-old Isaacman said before liftoff.

Poor weather caused a two-week delay. The crew needed favorable forecasts not only for launch, but for splash-down days later.

With limited supplies and no ability to reach the space station, they had no choice but to wait for conditions to improve.

Las Vegas man pleads guilty in lucrative telemarketing scam

NEW YORK (AP) — A Las Vegas man pleaded guilty Tuesday to a federal criminal charge alleging that he duped people into donating tens of millions of dollars to what they thought were charities, but were really political action committees or his own companies.

Richard Zeitlin, 54, entered the plea to conspiracy to commit wire fraud in Manhattan federal court, where sentencing was set for Dec. 10. A plea agreement he signed with prosecutors recommended a sentence of 10 to 13 years in prison.

He also agreed to forfeit $8.9 million, representing proceeds traceable to the crime, in addition to any fine, restitution or other penalty the judge might impose at sentencing.

Zeitlin carried out the fraud from 2017 through 2020 by using "call centers" that he has operated since at least 1994 to raise hundreds of millions of dollars for charities and political action committees, according to an indictment.

Since 2017, he used the call centers to defraud numerous donors by providing false and misleading information about how their money would be spent and the nature of the organizations that would receive their money, the indictment said.

Although donors were told they were helping veterans, law enforcement officers and breast cancer patients, up to 90 percent of the money raised went to Zeitlin's companies, according to court papers.

Fall planting provides months of continuous spring color

BY MELINDA MYERS

Welcome spring and create continuous color for several months with a collection of spring-flowering bulbs. After planting in the fall, you'll enjoy an array of flower colors that combine nicely with other spring-flowering trees, shrubs, and flowers.

Start the season with early blooming snowdrops. As winter fades watch for the dangling white flowers on six- to ten-inch-tall plants. Include these small flowers in rock gardens, mixed borders, and informal landscapes in sunny and part-shade locations.

Include a tapestry of colors with white, purple, lavender, and yellow crocus. Large Flowering Pickwick crocus offers unique blooms of white flowers with purple pinstripes. Its striped petals surround the red-orange stamens making this a standout in any planting. Crocus are a favorite of critters as well as gardeners so consider protecting them with a repellent as the leaves emerge in spring.

Look to early, mid, and late spring blooming tulips and daffodil varieties to maximize the color in your landscape throughout the spring.

Check catalog descriptions and package labels to help you select an array of bloom times. Longfield Gardens' Bloom Times Guide to Spring and Summer Bulbs (Longfield-Gardens.com) can also help you plan for three months of color in your landscape.

Look to Emperor, Kaufmaniana, and Greigii tulips for a bit of early spring color. Add some fragrance and showy, peony-like flowers with Double Early Foxtrot. This award-winning tulip has sturdy, weatherproof stems that support its loosely cupped flowers. Its petals contain a range of pink shades from white to deep rose.

Plant some Darwin Hybrid and Triumph tulips for mid-spring color in the garden. The two-toned flowers on Apricot Impression seem to glow and as a Darwin hybrid, they will have a long-lasting presence in your garden. Finish the spring season with fancy ruffled parrot tulips, fringed and lily tulips, and more single and double late bloomers. You'll enjoy the extended show and late spring flowers to enjoy in arrangements.

Don't overlook daffodils. You'll find a variety of flowers with long, short, large, and split trumpets. Daffodil flowers may be a different color than the color of the surrounding petals. Double varieties add a unique look to any garden.

The early- to mid-spring blooming Cyclamineus Tete-a-

Tete daffodil may be small in stature at seven inches but the bright yellow flowers and three blossoms per stem make it visible from a distance.

Combine some Armenian grape hyacinths with mid-spring blooming tulips, daffodils, and perennials. Their small, cobalt-blue, fragrant flowers last weeks and look good wherever they are planted.

Bridge spring and summer flower seasons in your garden with Purple Sensation allium. This late spring blooming bulb has four-inch round purple flowers high atop 24 to 30" stems. These reliable bloomers are critter-resistant like daffodils and grape hyacinths. Enjoy them in your garden, fresh bouquets, and dried flower arrangements.

Make this the year you select and do some fall planting of various early, mid, and late spring flowering bulbs. You'll be rewarded with a burst of early spring color and sustained beauty from a mix of spring flowering bulbs.

At a hearing last week, the federal judge overseeing those cases declined to grant preliminary approval of the deal and kicked it back to attorneys to address her concerns with certain aspects of the agreement.

On Tuesday, another lawsuit was filed against the NCAA, targeting the settlement agreement. The South Dakota attorney general's complaint on behalf of his state's two Division I universities — South Dakota State and the University of South Dakota — alleges the proposed settlement forces smaller schools like those to be responsible for a disproportionate share of the cost.

The Michigan lawsuit aims to recoup what notable stars such as Robinson and Edwards were denied when they played, and it claims the players should be compensated for the highlights and replays of their exploits that are still used by television networks.

"These iconic moments have been repeatedly shown and replayed on BTN (Big Ten Network) and related networks, helping continue the fascination and passion of the sport. They have significantly contributed to the revenue generated by the NCAA and its partners," the lawsuit said.

The NCAA did not immediately respond to a request for comment from The Associated Press.

Robinson was a record-breaking quarterback for Michigan from 2009-12 who was given the nickname Shoe-lace because he played with untied cleats. He was also depicted on the cover of the last EA Sports NCAA video game before the series was discontinued for a decade because of the first lawsuit targeting the NCAA's ban on NIL compensation. The game returned this year as College Football '25, with players being paid to have their names and likenesses used.

"They made hundreds of millions off the Michigan brand. The Michigan brand, I'd argue, is the most valuable in college sports. They made hundreds of millions of dollars, BTN made millions, and these guys didn't get any of it," Michigan-based attorney Jim Acho told the AP. "That's just wrong, and it's not just wrong it's unlawful."

Robinson recently had worked as a football staffer for the school but was let go in May after an arrest for suspicion of driving while intoxicated.

Edwards played from 2001-04 and is considered one of the greatest receivers in school history. He was an All-American who went on to become a first-round draft pick by the Cleveland Browns.

Martin played defensive line for the Wolverines from 2008-11. Crable played linebacker from 2003-07.

Acho said it is too speculative to know if approval of the NCAA's settlement agreement will impact this new lawsuit.

"And it's too speculative for me to hold off on filing," he said.

CLEAN UP:

prised 88% of the land area in 2017," the department's report says.

The report also notes that wetlands, forests and native grasslands have declined in the watershed.

Travis Entenman is the managing director of Friends of the Big Sioux River. He said suspended solids affect plant and fish life.

"Excessive sedimentation reduces oxygen levels and blocks sunlight that our underwater plants need," he said. "If we had clearer water, more fish — outside of carp — would be able to thrive."

University of South Dakota Sustainability and Environment Professor Mark Sweeney said research shows suspended solids in the Big Sioux have increased in the 2000s compared to the 1970s and '80s. He said the problem is especially bad for filter-feeding fish.

"They basically choke on the sediment," Sweeney said.

He added that other fish dependent on good visibility are also affected.

The segment of the Big Sioux is one of many polluted waterways in South Dakota. A recent report showed about 80% of the rivers, streams and lakes tested in South Dakota are too polluted for at least one of their intended uses.

The department's recommendations for the 10-mile Big Sioux segment say no water sample should have more than 158 milligrams of suspended particles per liter, and the average should stay below 90 milligrams over any 30 days.

The plan also includes recommendations: relocating livestock away from streams, protecting grasses along streams, conserving wetlands and sloughs, and promoting soil health practices that reduce sediment runoff. It also advises continued funding and marketing of existing financial incentives for those practices.

Existing incentives include a $3 million state program paying landowners to grow and maintain grass strips along the river and its tributaries. The state pays up to $575 per acre for cropland and up to $157 per acre for pastureland enrolled.

Incentives are the primary way the state attempts to achieve cleaner waterways. Jay Gilbertson, manager of the East Dakota Water Development District, based in Brookings, said the state does not mandate action by individual polluters.

"The department says, 'We don't want to make people do anything,'" he said. "Well, that's the problem then."

Entenman agreed, saying he welcomes the development of the total maximum daily loads and the report about where the pollution originates. But, he added, "We need to make sure there is follow-through and these issues are being remedied."

Marisa Lubeck, a spokesperson with the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency's Region 8 Office (which includes South Dakota), sent a statement explaining states and local governments are responsible for ensuring plans are followed.

"The plan provides a foundation to support future implementation, which is led by state and local organizations rather than the federal government," she said.

Public comments on the draft document must be submitted by Sept. 28 and may be emailed to DANRmail@state.sd.us.

Notice of Request for Clean Water Act Section 319 Project Proposals

The South Dakota Department of Agriculture and Natural Resources (DANR) is accepting applications for projects eligible for federal Clean Water Act, Section 319 nonpoint source pollution control grants. The application deadline is October 1, 2024.

Section 319 of the federal Clean Water Act provides grants to reduce water pollution from nonpoint sources, such as polluted runoff from urban, agricultural and forest lands.

Eligible applicants include governmental agencies; state government subdivisions, such as conservation districts, water development districts, counties, and municipalities; universities; certain nonprofit organizations; and federally recognized Indian tribes. Other groups may participate by applying through one of the eligible entities as a project partner.

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency grants require 40 percent local match.

Interested parties are encouraged to contact DANR at (605) 773-5682 or obtain application guidance at: <https://danr.sd.gov/Conservation/WatershedProtection/Section319/Guidance.aspx>

Your Opinions

Letters from readers do not necessarily reflect the opinions of the Plainsman or News Media Corp.

To the Editor:

I congratulate Mr. Milo Pietz as the first person to be inducted into the Huron High School Fine Arts Hall of Fame...

The picture of the four young men gave me flashbacks to the good times I had at HHS. I enjoyed listening to them at Tiger Follies...

If you want to see and hear some old guys sing, who still have strong voices, I suggest you go to the 'Love of Fine Arts' show...

It will be worth your time.

I've been a music lover my whole life. Back then, I liked to listen to it the way it was meant to be played - rock and roll style.

One of my favorite songs was 'Rocky Mountain Way' by Joe Walsh. Did you know that Huron native - and HHS graduate - Rocke Grace played keyboards on the album...

In response to Willie Williams' Letter to the Editor - I happen to know he was the boogie man.

I used to see him get down and boogie at The Plains some 40-plus years ago!

After writing this letter, it's safe to say I failed creative printing in high school.

Trump and Harris agree marijuana should be legal, however, its unclear if either would do anything about it as president essentially the same as Hillary Clinton's. 'I really believe we should leave it up to the states,' he said, although he made it clear that he took a dim view of legalization...

After former President Donald Trump endorsed a Florida ballot initiative that would legalize recreational marijuana in that state, Vice President Kamala Harris accused her Republican opponent of flip-flopping on the issue...

Despite Trump's avowed preference for letting states go their own way on marijuana policy, his first attorney general, Jeff Sessions, rescinded a Justice Department memo that encouraged federal prosecutors to leave state-licensed cannabis suppliers alone...

As president, Trump also proposed eliminating an annually renewed spending rider that bars the Justice Department from interfering with state medical marijuana programs.

Those two moves, the Harris campaign argues, were plainly inconsistent with what Trump said in a Truth Social post on Saturday.

During that campaign, Trump's position on marijuana legalization was

Just say no to indiscriminate 'vote no' approach on ballot questions

Whether he knows it or not, Chris Larson is channeling Nancy Reagan. Mrs. Reagan asked us to 'just say no to drugs.' Larson is asking us to say no to four issues that will be on South Dakota's November ballot.

Larson, described in a story from The Dakota Scout as a conservative Republican activist and entrepreneur from Minnehaha County, has set up a website to point out why those four issues aren't worth your vote.

The home page of Larson's site admonishes visitors with this message: 'Don't California Our South Dakota.'

It's as if a yes vote on any of these issues would turn us all into a bunch of San Francisco hippies.

In addition to a raft of candidates on the November ballot, South Dakota voters will also have to decide on a total of seven ballot issues. Larson has something bad to say about four of them but remains mute on the other three.

Those three are Initiated Measure 28, which is intended to eliminate the state sales tax on groceries; Amendment E, on the ballot courtesy of the state Legislature, which would edit male pronouns from the language in the state constitution; and Amendment F, also on the ballot courtesy of the Legislature, which would allow the state to impose work requirement for Medicaid recipients.

Larson created the website to counter the influence of political action committees and wealthy donors. 'With 30 years of starting and running my own business, I recognize slick marketing and sales pitches being put on consumers,' Larson stated on his website.

Larson's response to those outside influences was to create a website that's rather, well, slick. But voters are smart enough to know what they're getting into when they visit a site like Larson's.

Larson's one-stop-shop for learning how to vote no is an insult to the intelligence of the state's voters. Those voters are completely capable of seeing through slick marketing and sales pitches to form an opinion about what's best for their state.

Ballot issues deserve a citizen's patient consideration, not a one-size-fits-all lesson in how to vote no.

There has to be a better way to educate yourself on the ballot issues.

Fox News worked overtime to turn the phrase 'fair and balanced' into a punchline, but that's just the kind of coverage of the issues that is needed for voters to make an informed choice at the ballot box.

Fortunately for South Dakota voters, even with the election less than two months away, there are sources for the kind of reporting that voters need.

South Dakota Searchlight's website, at southdakotasearchlight.com, has a place on its homepage called 'South Dakota Election 2024.'

There readers will find plenty of news and commentary about the election as well as a Voter Guide and links to the secretary of state's website for information on registering to vote, voting early and finding your polling place.

The homepage for the South Dakota News Watch website, sdnews-

Down in the Trenches

By: Dana Hess

watch.org, offers some of the same links to the secretary of state's website in its 'South Dakota Voter Guide.'

Its explanations of the seven ballot issues are taken from the reporting that News Watch has done, offering both sides of the issues without taking sides.

For those voters who distrust the media in any form, check the Secretary of State's homepage, sdsos.gov, for the '2024 General Election Ballot Question Information Pamphlet.'

This printable document includes an explanation of each ballot issue by the state's attorney general as well as pro statements from backers of the ballot issue and con statements from those who would like you to vote no.

Any of those three options is a better way to decide how to mark your ballot than relying on something like Larson's all-negative, all-the-time website.

Heartland Cuisine: Huron Area Concert Association

Concert series begins Oct. 9

Street Corner Symphony to perform Oct. 9 at 7:30 p.m. at JVCS

What is the best known secret in Huron? Huron Area Concert Association (HACA), and it has been in existence since 1971.

Members can attend six local concerts with the annual membership ticket and, if willing to travel, could attend concerts in Mitchell and Pierre with their membership ticket. That is 16 concerts for one low price — plus gas, of course. It is not too late to get a ticket!

The first concert for the Huron area is Wednesday, Oct. 9, at James Valley Christian School and is Street Corner Symphony, a five-voice male a cappella ensemble. The concert starts at 7:30 p.m.

HACA has existed in Huron for more than 50 years and its mission is to cultivate interest in music, provide a variety of concerts in the Huron area and build a permanent concert audience.

The HACA board is made up of Emma Tschetter, president; Susan Hines, treasurer; Molly Lamont, publicity; Ann Blondheim, membership; June Wipf, Betty Albright and Connor Langbehn, business sponsors; Jessica Langbehn, communications; Wilma Pageler, hospitality; and Jessica Hotchkiss, volunteer coordinator.

The board works with Allied Concert Services (www.alliedconcertservices.com) to select a variety of concerts (usually five) for audiences to experience. The number of concerts is based upon the income from ticket sales plus the cost for the musical artist(s).

This year, a season ticket for can be purchased for $60, with six concerts in the Huron area. A family membership is $130 and includes a ticket for entire family, no matter how many in the family. A student membership is $15 for high school and college students.

If you have questions or need further information, call Emma at 605-353-4839, or any of the board members.

Tigers fall in four sets on the road against Watertown

BY CURT NETTINGA OF THE PLAINSMAN

W A T E R T O W N — The Huron Tigers played well in spurts Tuesday night, but the Watertown Arrows, ranked No. 5 in Class AA volleyball, had more spurts and held on for a 3-1 (26-24, 25-16 21-25, 25-16) win in ESD action at the Watertown Civic Arena.

"Credit Watertown for putting us in bad situations tonight and forcing us into errors," Huron coach Josh Lien said after the match. "We had too many 'my fault' errors tonight and you cannot make the types of mistakes we made tonight, against a team that is as good as Watertown."

Huron looked to put the opening set away early, as a 7-1 run, keyed by three kills from Addyson Knight, two from Aurora Dreyer and an Aly Davis ace staked the Tigers to a 13-6 lead. Huron was able to maintain an edge through the mid-portion of the set, before the Arrows caught fire and went on a 9-0 run, mostly on the left-handed serve of Emma Hendricks, who had five aces in the run. Madisyn Grimsrud opened the run with a kill and capped it with another.

Trailing 18-15, the Tigers rallied, as Chloe Carr got a kill and Hailley Rogers stroked an ace. A Davis kill, and a Dreyer block kill knotted the score at 19-all, only to watch Watertown go on a mini-run, led by Emery Thury's back-to-back kills. Huron refused to go away however, rallying behind Knight and Carr to tie the score at 24-24, before a kill by Reese Munger and an ace by Natalie Pearson closed out the 26-24 win for the Arrows.

Watertown took an early lead in the second set, going on a 5-0 run and taking a 9-4 lead on an ace by Grace Corey. Huron got a block kill from Dreyer, a kill from setter Jencie Goergen and an ace from Madison Jurgens to claw back to within a point.

While the Tigers stayed close, Thury caught fire down the stretch, collecting eight kills in the set and closing out the 25-16 Arrow win.

The third set looked to follow the same script as the second, as Watertown owned the lead early and maintained it through the first half of the set. A Knight kill knotted the score at 12 and Dreyer scored to give Huron a lead. The score remained close throughout the set, but three straight Arrow hitting errors turned a Huron

Woman's unorthodox romance has unintended consequence

DEAR ABBY: A close male friend, "Will," ended our friendship without warning. I didn't know he had such strong feelings about my current arrangement. I have been dating a married man, "Bart," whose wife suggested he get himself a girlfriend if he wanted sex/intimacy/companionship. She also told him she would "never want to sleep with him again." It has been 10 years since they were last intimate or even shared a bed. They don't live together; Bart lives in his guest house. They share a son, which is why he doesn't want to leave.

As a parent, I understand. It's why I stayed in my own marriage for so long. The circumstances are less than ideal and something I never thought I'd be a part of, but I haven't felt this wonderful in years. My ex-husband and I were never this compatible. When I'm with Bart, it's magical, and I believe it's mutual.

For this choice of mine, Will has severed our friendship. He did it via text. I'd told him about it two weeks earlier, and he advised me to be careful. He called Bart and me "cheaters," but it's not exactly like that. I'm deeply hurt over this loss. I want to know if Will is in the wrong or if I am. -- NO CHEATER IN ARIZONA

DEAR NO CHEATER: Does who is "right or wrong" matter at this point? Your friend Will does not approve of your affair with Bart because of his marital status and has chosen to distance himself. That's his privilege. You made an adult decision to engage in this relationship, and it has cost you a friend. Live your life, but don't be shocked if others also feel the way Will does.

DEAR ABBY: I've been dating a wonderful guy for the last six months. Our relationship is great, but he has an ex who is much younger than us (a 16-year age gap). He started seeing her while she was pregnant by someone else.

Dear Abby

ABIGAIL VANBUREN

He stayed with her until the baby was 3, but, given the circumstances, he continues to get the baby for weekends, etc. He is not on the birth certificate, but the baby knows only him as her dad.

My problem is the ex. She constantly calls or texts him for money or to say she bought things for the little girl. She has called him to come over to hang out, and, most recently, asked him to co-sign for a new car for her.

I'm not OK with the lack of boundaries, and I have said so. He hears me and has told her several times to back off, but she doesn't listen. It's causing arguments between us. The child isn't his actual child, but that fact obviously isn't changing anything. Should I walk away? -- THIRD WHEEL IN THE EAST

DEAR THIRD WHEEL: Your boyfriend is clearly attached to the little girl. You can't change that, nor should you try. That said, he is still with you in spite of the fact that his ex may be trying to get him (and his financial support) back. Whether you should grit your teeth and tolerate it isn't something I can answer. Your boyfriend can, however, and whether you should walk away is a question you should be asking him.

galization in November, he cited reasons to welcome that outcome. "Someone should not be a criminal in Florida" for possessing marijuana "when this is legal in so many other States," Trump wrote. Pot busts, he added, "ruin lives & waste Taxpayer Dollars."

It is fair to say that Trump's views on marijuana legalization have evolved. But the same is true of Harris.

As USA Today notes, "Harris has been criticized for aggressively prosecuting weed-related crimes when she was California's attorney general and San Francisco's district attorney, particularly given the racial disparities in punishment nationwide." She opposed a California legalization initiative in 2010, when she was the San Francisco district attorney; laughed at a question about legalization in 2014, when she was running for attorney general against a Republican who favored it; and declined, as California's attorney general, to take a position on the 2016 initiative that legalized recreational use in her state.

As a senator two years later, Harris finally took the plunge, saying "we need to decriminalize marijuana nationwide." Later that year, she cosponsored a bill that would have repealed the federal ban, and she introduced a similar bill in 2019.

President Joe Biden, by contrast, has always resisted federal legalization, and the 2024 Democratic platform says nothing about it. The Republican platform, meanwhile, does not even allude to marijuana reform.

That silence is striking, given that 38 states have legalized medical marijuana and 24 of them, accounting for most of the U.S. population, also allow recreational use. According to Gallup, 70% of Americans -- including 87% of Democrats, 70% of independents, and 55% of Republicans -- think marijuana should be legal.

As of Saturday, both major-party presidential candidates agree. But it remains unclear whether either is prepared to do anything about it.

POLL:

a moderate amount, and an overwhelming majority, 82%, also have at least a moderate amount of trust in Harris and her campaign.

Most Americans — around 7 in 10 — trust the government certifications of election results at least a moderate amount, according to the survey. Majorities also trust national and local TV news networks, as well as local or national newspapers, to provide accurate information about the outcome of this year's presidential election.

Danielle Almeida, a 45-year-old Democrat from Briarcliff Manor, New York, said she trusts government-certified election results and finds it alarming that some Americans don't.

"In order to have a democracy, we have to trust the system and the results of our elections," she said, adding that she thinks Trump "does not care about fact-checking because he believes his supporters don't care, either."

Americans are less likely to trust the campaigns overall — compared to sources such as the government and the media — but they have a higher level of trust in Harris and her campaign than in Trump and his campaign to provide accurate information about the outcome of the election. About half have at least a "moderate" amount of trust in Harris and her campaign. By contrast, about 4 in 10 have at least a moderate amount of trust in Trump and his campaign.

Some Republicans' distrust of election results started far before the 2020 election.

Richard Baum, 60, a conservative independent from Odessa, Texas, said his suspicions began in the 2000 U.S. presidential race between George W. Bush and Al Gore. After Bush won by a slim margin, "hanging chads" became an unlikely symbol of a disputed presidential election as small anomalies common in elections ballooned into major national controversies.

"There was some stuff there that didn't seem right that made a lot of doubts in my mind about if you can trust the government," Baum said.

Baum said he would trust election results only if voting took place on only a single candidate. Slightly less than half of Americans say it's "very easy" or "somewhat easy" to find factual information about the candidates and their positions, and only about one-third say it's easy to know if what candidates are saying is true or not.

About 6 in 10 Americans say it's easy for them to understand the difference between fact and opinion when it comes to information about the upcoming

you. It's not hard to find," she said.

About 8 in 10 Americans say that when it comes to getting information about the government, the spread of misinformation is a "major problem." That is essentially unchanged from when the question was asked in 2020.

Lisa Kuda, a 57-year-old Republican from Palm Harbor, Florida, said she gets most of her news from social media and friends. She said she feels alienated from most news sources other than Fox News.

"Misinformation is everywhere," she said. "It's really difficult to find information about candidates."

When Americans see news about the election and want to find out whether it's true, 40% say they turn to an internet search first. Much smaller shares — around 1 in 10 for each — say they first check cable news, national TV news or social media.

Baum, from Texas, said he finds it difficult to easily access information about candidates because he believes social media platforms "are censoring conservative ideologies." He also doesn't trust Google and instead turns to conservative networks and podcasts such as One America News and conservative podcasters to fact-check claims he's unsure about.

Almeida's process looks much different. She starts with a Google search and wades through multiple articles from news outlets such as The New York Times and NBC News, making note of any differences. If multiple articles have the same information, she said, she's more likely to trust it.

"Misinformation is a huge problem," she said. "You have to take time to do your research."

day, early voting and mail-in ballots were banned and photo IDs were required at all polling places.

Many Americans doubt the veracity of both presidential candidates' campaign messages, but skepticism about Trump's campaign is higher, the USAFacts/AP-NORC survey found.

About 6 in 10 Americans believe that Trump's campaign messages are "rarely" or "never" based on factual information, compared to 45% who say that about Harris' campaign messages.

Many Americans also say it's hard to discern fact from fiction when it comes to the presidential election, but only about 4 in 10 say it's easy to know whether information is true or not.

Americans are, however, more confident about factual information related to election logistics: About 7 in 10 Americans say it's easy to find information about how to register to vote, and about 6 in 10 say it's easy to find information about how to cast their ballot.

Michele Martin, a 56-year-old Pennsylvania Democrat, said she is "very concerned" about misinformation from politicians but finds it much easier to access basic voter information.

deficit into a one-point lead and the Tigers never gave it back. Davis collected a kill, Sam Mangmoradeth got on the score sheet with a kill to the corner, Davis got her second ace and Mangmoradeth closed the 25-21 win with another kill. "We did a great job of executing our plan in the third set tonight," Lien said. "We got Sam involved, got Chloe involved a little more and we did a good job of sharing the load." Watertown quickly established that there wouldn't be a fifth set, as they never trailed in the set and held an 11-6 lead before Huron began to come back. Davis sandwiched kills around one by Mangmoradeth, and suddenly the lead was down to only two points, 12-10. But the Arrows ran the next 11 points, mostly off the big swings of Grimsrud and Thury, to take a 21-10 lead and closed the deal from there. "We have a mini-goal of having more ace serves than our opponent," Lien said. "I think early on both teams were having trouble with serve-serve, but we both adapted and I think we probably stayed close with them serving. We took their shots and worked our way back, but they have a couple of really good hitters." Thury ended the match with 19 kills and Grimsrud added 16. Hendricks had six aces in the match for Watertown, which improves to 6-3 with the win.

For Huron, which slips to 3-4, Davis and Mangmoradeth each had eight kills, Knight and Dreyer had seven apiece and Carr ended with six kills, two of them block/kills. Goergen had three aces, three kills and 16 assists in the match. Huron returns to action for a Monday match, hosting Yankton in the homecoming volleyball match for the Tigers. The match will be followed by coronation on Monday night, as Huron begins its homecoming festivities. The Arrows swept the lower-level contests as well, winning the JV match 25-16 and 25-22, while the Sophomore match went three sets, with Watertown taking the 25-16, 15-25, 15-10 win.
