Shiloh offers free bus tours to veterans and their spouses on Nov. 11

In observance of Veterans Day, Shiloh National Military Park is hosting a free guided bus tour for veterans and their spouses on Monday, Nov. 11.

"The National Park Service cares for many sites dedicated to the American military, and also provides opportunities for our military community to connect with the important history they defend," said Shiloh Superintendent Catherine Bragaw.

Many national parks have strong military connections including battlefields, military parks, and historic sites.

Shiloh National Military Park was established by the veterans of the battle and signed into law by President Grover Cleveland in 1894, "In order that the armies of the southwest... may have the history of one of their memorable battles preserved on the ground where they fought."

Shiloh battlefield was administered by the Secretary of War, and under the direction until 1920, of the Shiloh Battlefield Commission, whose members were all veterans of the battle, both north and south.

In honor of these close ties between the National Park Service and the American military, Shiloh is offering the free guided bus tour for former and active-duty veterans and their spouses.

The four-hour tour takes place from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Participants are encouraged to bring water and snacks and wear clothing appropriate for the weather.

Seating is limited on the bus, so interested parties must pre-register by calling 731-689-5696.

Smoky Mountains' highest peak reverting to Cherokee name Kuwohi

GATLINBURG, Tenn. (AP) – The highest peak at Great Smoky Mountains National Park is officially reverting to its Cherokee name more than 150 years after a surveyor named it for a Confederate general.

The U.S. Board of Geographic Names voted last Wednesday in favor of a request from the Eastern Band of Cherokee Indians to officially change the name Clingmans Dome to Kuwohi, according to a news release from the park. The Cherokee name for the mountain translates to "mulberry place."

"The Great Smoky National Park team was proud to support this effort to officially restore the mountain and to recognize its importance to the Cherokee People," Superintendent

Cassius Cash said in the release. "The Cherokee People have had strong connections to Kuwohi and the surrounding area, long before the land became a national park. The National Park Service looks forward to continuing to work with the Cherokee People to share their story and preserve this landscape together."

Kuwohi is a sacred place for the Cherokee people and is the highest point within the traditional Cherokee homeland, according to the park. The peak is visible from the Qualla Boundary, home of the Eastern Band of Cherokee Indians. Great Smoky Mountains National Park closes Kuwohi every year for three half-days so that predominantly Cherokee schools can visit the mountain and learn its history.

Great Smoky Mountains National Park, on the Tennessee-North Carolina border, is America's most visited national park, and Kuwohi is one its most popular sites, with more than 650,000 visitors per year. The peak became known as Clingmans Dome following an 1859 survey by geographer Arnold Guyot, who named it for Thomas Lanier Clingman, a Confederate Brigadier General as well as a lawyer, U.S. Representative and Senator from North Carolina, according to the park.

The name-restoration proposal was submitted in January by Eastern Band of Cherokee Indians Principal Chief Michell Hicks.
