HAPPY CAMPERS

A Complete Guide To Summer Fun

School's out for summer
— well almost.

Kids have another three months before they exchange their classroom time for longer days at home and in the surrounding outdoors. Even though three months may seem far away, camps are already beginning to fill up. Now is the time to review the options and choose what is right for your family.

Does your child want to make new friends, discover a new hobby, or just engage in some fun activities and be a kid? Camps around town offer all those possibilities. Some include a bit of everything while others specialize in sports, music and dance, arts and crafts, science and technology, and other areas of interest.

Use this magazine as a resource to narrow down the choices and find the right ones for you. Hopefully your children can make lasting memories this summer.

BENFIELD SPORTSCENTER

By Jaina Peveto

Whether it's Carnival Day, spirit week or just a regular day at Benfield Sportscenter's weekly summer camp, it's never a dull day for campers. Kids ages 5-13 are welcomed for days filled with fun activities, including floor hockey, dodgeball, basketball, volleyball and more.

Benfield Sportscenter, formerly known as Maryland Sportsplex, has been run by Ben and Luke Pardew since 2013. Before it was Maryland Sportsplex, the building was owned by Ben and Luke's dad, Rick Pardew, who originally built it as an ice rink.

The camp, which has been held yearly since the Pardews took over, gives kids the opportunity to try a variety of sports and games in a less structured setting than a typical gym class. Benfield Sportscenter owner Ben Pardew enjoys how the camp gives kids the opportunity to try sports they might otherwise never have tried, letting them play in a variety of ways and giving them insight into whether they want to continue with any of those sports outside of camp.

"You're playing a bunch of minigames based on a sport that's not necessarily playing the sport, but you're just goofing around having fun, getting introduced to different sports and activities," Dani Victorio explained.

Victorio runs various Benfield Sportscenter events on an everyday basis, including helping camp director Scott Gurien run the summer camp.

The day begins and ends with free play, which the campers will sometimes use to play games that they've learned from the camp counselors. Many of the games are ones the counselors enjoyed during their childhoods, with those games now being introduced to a new generation.

"Once we teach them a game for their free time ... They can't wait for free play, and they're ready to go," Victorio said.

After free time, the campers play tagging games, and later in the day, they participate in different sessions. Sessions are split up by snack time and lunch, which campers can either bring from home or purchase at the snack bar.

Because some students only come for half the day or might attend multiple weeks, Benfield Sportscenter tries to vary the sessions. Organized sports and dodgeball alternate between the morning and afternoon sessions. Sometimes, one of the activities is a three-station rotation where each of Benfield Sportscenter's three courts features a different sport, letting campers choose what they're most interested in trying.

"It's not sport specific," Pardew said. "It's not like when you go to a soccer camp and you're doing drills to get better at soccer, for instance. It's just to continue to play a variety of sports in a slightly structured manner ... it's more the playing of the different sports between competitive fun."

Pardew, Victorio and the others at Benfield Sportscenter make camp a unique experience in many ways. They have a book full of different games, featuring their own spins. In addition, occasionally they'll hold special themed days and weeks, such as Carnival Day. That day, the camp transforms into a carnival, where kids can win prizes and even find golden tickets that let them be counselors in the face.

There's typically a ratio of at least one counselor for every 10 kids at camp, and the counselors all have medication administration training. The counselor team is mostly made up of former campers who came back year after year and have stayed as a part of the Benfield Sportscenter family even after aging out.

The Pardews aren't the only ones making it a family business. There are multiple pairs of siblings on the staff of Benfield Sportscenter who came up through the program, first as campers, then as counselors-in-training, and then as counselors.

"(Carnival Day) was the brainchild of my younger brother and Ben, actually," Victorio said. "Family-owned business. My whole family has worked here at some point."

Giving kids the chance to exercise and giving them reason to enjoy being active are important parts of the camp for Pardew. He finds that the leisure time of kids today is often a lot more structured and centered around electronics. "It's a great outlet for your kids during the summer, away from their devices," Pardew said.

This year's summer camp will take place from June 22 through August 21, from 8:30am to 5:00pm. Campers can come for either the full day or just half the day, and early and late care are available for an additional fee. Benfield Sportscenter is located at 1031 Benfield Boulevard.
